Dear Dr Scott:

Ref: ePortfolios: The Method of Choice for Validation

Our reviewers have now considered your revised paper and have recommended publication in the Community College Journal of Research and Practice. We are pleased to accept your paper that will now be forwarded for our copy editing and then for the publisher's copy editing and typesetting processes.

You will receive proofs for checking, and instructions for transfer of copyright, in due course. An initial pre-production proofread process will be completed. You may not be contacted during the pre-production stage if we don't have any questions for you. Once any initial queries we do send to you are satisfied and your manuscript is forwarded to the publisher, it may be several more months before final proofs are sent to you by the publisher due to our extensive backlog of accepted manuscripts.

Please know that we have recently implemented iFirst, an online publication system, thus, you should expect your manuscript to be published online first, then in a print issue in due time.

The publisher will also request that proofs are checked through the publisher's tracking system and returned within 48 hours of receipt. Once again, as we have a rather healthy backlog, it could be many months before you hear from the publisher in this regard.

Thank you for your contribution to Community College Journal of Research and Practice and we look forward to receiving further submissions from you.

Sincerely,
Deborah L. Floyd
Editor in Chief, Community College Journal of Research and Practice CCJRP@Fau.Edu
